CHAPTER XX. Storm Signals.

Though Lidgerwood had been up for the better part of two nights and the day intervening, is was apparent to at least one member of the headquarters force that he did not go to bed immediately after the arrival of the service car from telegram which Operator Dix found imoludes all our charges. Others advertise lower rates, etc.; they almost offer toogive you the money; but when you go to their office they will confront you with all sorts of charges for commissions, extras, etc., which make the loss The message was addressed to Leckhard, superintendent of the Pannikin division of the Pacific Southwestern system, at Copah. It was in cipher, and it contained two uncodified words-"Fort" let us tell you what we are doing and have and "McCook," which small circumstance been doing for twelve years. The comparison set Dix to thinking-Fort McCook being will surprise you. Our indersement is in the the army post, twelve miles as the crow flies, down the Pannikin from Copah. Now Dix was not one of the rebels. On the contrary, he was one of the few loyal telegraphers who had promised McClos-key to stand by the Lidgerwood management in case the rebellion grew into an organized attempt to tie up the road. But the young man had, for his chief weakness, a prying curiosity which had led him, in times past, to experiment with the private office code until he had finally liscovered the key to it. Hence, a little while after the sending of the Leckhard message, Callahan, the train dispatcher, hearing an emphatic "Gee whiz!" from Dix's corner, looked up from his train sheet to say, "What

> "Nothing," said Dix, shortly, but Callahan observed that he was hastily folding and pocketing the top sheet of the pad upon which he had been writing. Dix went off duty at 11, his second trick beginning at 3 in the afternoon. It was between 3 and 4 when McCloskey, having strengthened his defenses in every way he could devise, rapped at the door of his chief's sleeping room. Fifteen minutes later Lidgerwood joined the trainmaster in the private office. "I couldn't let you sleep any longer," McCloskey began, apologetically, "and I don't know but you'll give me what-for

Along about 10 o'clock this morning Davidson, the manager of the Copperette, came down to see Mr. Brewster. He gave the president a long song and dance about the tough trail and the poor accommodations for a pleasure party up at the mine, and the upshot of it was that Mr. Brewster went out to the mine with Lidgerwood said "Damn!" and let it go

> Closkey went on with his report, his "Taking it for granted that you mean to fight this thing to a cold finish, I've done everything I could think of. Thanks to Williams and Bradford, and a few others like them, we can count on a good third of the trainmen; and I've got about the same proportion of the operators in line for us. Taking advantage ers gave us, I've scattered these men of ours east and west on the day trains to the points where the trouble will hit us at 12 o'clock tonight.' "Good!" said Lidgerwood, briefly. "How will you handle it?" "It will handle itself, barring too many broken heads. At midnight, in every important office where a striker throws down his pen and grounds his wire, one of our men will walk in and keep the ball rolling. And on every train in transit at of, there will be a relief crew of some sort, deadheading over the road, and ready to fall in line and keep it coming when the other fellows fall out. Again the superintendent nodded approval. The trainmaster was showing imself at his loyal best. "That brings us down to Angels and the present, Mac. How do we stand to know, said McCloskey, his homely face emphasizing his perplexity. "They that's so we're outnumbered here six to one. I can't find out anything for cer-Gridley is still away, and Dawson hasn't got back, and nobody else knows anything about the shop force."

"You say Dawson isn't in? He didn't have more than five or six hours' work "He had a bit of bad luck. He got the nain line cleared early this morning, but in shifting his train and the 'cripples' on he abandoned spur a culvert broke and let the big crane off. He has been all day getting it on again, but he'll be in before dark-so Goodloe says." "And how about Benson?" queried Lid-

"He's on 203. I caught him on the other side of Crosswater, and took the iberty of signing your name to a wire "That was right. Supt. Friedman says the plan of mix-

They see beyond the reservation, and more than half of our graduates are actually making a success away from the reservation. Our boys and girls learn more of their government: become thoroughly acquainted with their white neighbors; have impressed upon them the ultimate goal of citizenship, with its entailing duties and responsibilities, as well as privileges; grow to be strong under firm, yet kindly, discipline; the complainant, curtly, and Schleisinger made no further objections.

He stated further that of all places in the world he had visited he had found none where the white and colored races, living side by side, dwelled in such satisfactory relationship as in the south.

Fully 1,200 teachers of Luzerne county, Pa., declared in a resolution adopted at an institute held recently at Wilaesbarre that they would gladly become members of the American Federation of Labor if a way can be devised for joining it. The teachers are ripe for organization, hoping thereby to secure moral and financial support in their efforts to perfect a state organization for the purpose of securing legislation beneficial to themselves. This plan of the teachers includes laws pro viding for fixed salaries, for the codifica tion of the school laws, for making their positions permanent after five years' service, for establishing a teachers' retirement fund, and for providing for the elimination of politics from all educational work.

The question of seven-day labor in continuous processes in the iron and steel industry will be investigated by a committee appointed by E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporaand Steel Institute. This action is a sequence to the resolution passed at the meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute held in New York on May 27.

It is alleged also that the parents encourage the children, for it is comouted that the labors of a family of five a berry field would net from $6 to $12 daily. It is also charged that children under fourteen years of age were found working in canneries in and about dangerous machinery, the major portier of which was unguarded. Sixty-five skilled cigarmakers, among them a number of women, went from Pittsburg, Pa., recently to Tampa, Fla., to accept positions in the factories in which a strike has been on for some time Agents of these cigar factories were in Pittsburg for a week or more getting together a force to send south. They wanted only the very best workmen, so they had some difficulty in securing a goodly number for the first quota. It is reported that inducements of an extraor-dinary nature were held out before re-cruits to take the places of the strikers

Technical education, although opposes strenuously by the labor unions in the days gone by, seems to have come to be country as of vast benefit, and now in localities, wherever technical training is a part of the college or school curhave been quick to take advantage of it In line with this modern thought is the report that night industrial schools are to be started in St. Paul. Minn., this winter by the St. Paul Builders' Exchange in co-operation with the St. Paul Institute and the board of school in-spectors (the public school board).

In Pittsburg the other day a fifteen-year-old-girl was found working for 1 cent an hour-10 cents a day or 60 cents week. She was Celia Gold, a sweet faced Roumanian girl, and she was found eking out an existence on this pittance in the employ of a cigar factory.

New York's Stationery Bill.

New York has to pay annually what s probably the biggest stationery and printing bill of any municipality. Last rear it was over $1,300,000. New York prints a daily newspaper of its own, the City Record, which helps along the bill somewhat. It cost $262,000 to print the City Record in 1909. Uncle Sam has his own printing shops, so that it isn't possible to compare his printing bill with the bill New York has to settle every year, because New York has to go out and get its printing done like any private corporation.

Of the big city departments the finance department runs up the biggest printing and stationery bill. Last year it was over $200,000. Whenever New York decides to get out a bond issue it makes the man who orders the stationery group. Those who orders the stat'onery groan. Those nice looking green and gold bonds cost over a dollar aplece, which would mean $35,000 for a thirty-five-million-dollar bond Probably no private consumer, ever the largest corporations, has anything like the same number of stationery forms made to order as the city. The department of health, for instance, has no less than 725 different forms to be ordered. Other departments have almost as many. It requires a big three-story warehouse on Reade street to hold all of New York's stationery. There are $200,000 worth of blank books, ledgers, etc., bought every year and stored there. Everything is carted to the warehouse, whence supplies are drawn by the different departments as they need them.
